

THE MILLION-COPY BESTSELLER

RICHARD OSMAN

The Man Who Died TWICE

THE NEW THURSDAY MURDER CLUB MYSTERY

RICHARD OSMAN

The Man Who Died TWICE

Contents

PART ONE: Your Friends are Sure to Visit

- Chapter 1
- Chapter 2
- Chapter 3
- Chapter 4
- Chapter 5
- Chapter 6
- Chapter 7
- Chapter 8
- Chapter 9
- Chapter 10
- Chapter 11
- Chapter 12
- Chapter 13
- Chapter 14
- Chapter 15
- Chapter 16
- Chapter 17
- Chapter 18
- Chapter 19
- Chapter 20
- Chapter 21
- Chapter 22
- Chapter 23
- Chapter 24
- Chapter 25
- Chapter 26
- Chapter 27
- Chapter 28
- Chapter 29

PART TWO: At Times, You Won't Believe Your Eyes

- Chapter 30
- Chapter 31
- Chapter 32
- Chapter 33
- Chapter 34
- Chapter 35
- Chapter 36
- Chapter 37
- Chapter 38
- Chapter 39
- Chapter 40
- Chapter 41
- Chapter 42
- Chapter 43
- Chapter 44
- Chapter 45
- Chapter 46
- Chapter 47
- Chapter 48
- Chapter 49
- Chapter 50
- Chapter 51
- Chapter 52
- Chapter 53
- Chapter 54
- Chapter 55
- Chapter 56
- Chapter 57
- Chapter 58
- Chapter 59
- Chapter 60
- Chapter 61
- Chapter 62
- Chapter 63

PART THREE: So Many Day Trips for You to Enjoy

- Chapter 64

Chapter 65
Chapter 66
Chapter 67
Chapter 68
Chapter 69
Chapter 70
Chapter 71
Chapter 72
Chapter 73
Chapter 74
Chapter 75
Chapter 76
Chapter 77
Chapter 78
Chapter 79
Chapter 80
Chapter 81
Chapter 82
Chapter 83
Chapter 84

Acknowledgements

About the Author

Richard Osman is an author, producer and television presenter. His first novel, The Thursday Murder Club, was a million-copy bestseller. Critics have already described The Man Who Died Twice as 'his second novel'.

PRAISE FOR

The Thursday
MURDER Club

'Elegant and witty ... It is delightful' DAILY MAIL

'A gripping read and rather moving' SUNDAY TIMES

'As the bodies pile up and more is revealed of the lives and loves of Joyce, Ibrahim, Ron and Elizabeth, you can't help cheering them on – and hoping to meet them again soon' THE TIMES

'One of the most enjoyable books of the year ... Well-written, hilarious and joyously big-hearted' DAILY EXPRESS

'Pure escapism' GUARDIAN

'As gripping as it is funny' EVENING STANDARD

'Christie-style sleuthing with brilliant skill' WOMAN & HOME

'A charming, clever debut' STYLIST

'Quirky, joyful and oh-so-British' HEAT

'Witty, warm and wise with irresistible characters.
This is one of the most delightful novels of the year'

DAILY MIRROR

'Funny and original' SUN

'A witty and poignant tale' DAILY TELEGRAPH

'Keenly observed, drily funny ... Delight after delight from first page to last' RED

'A charming adventure' HELLO!

'An absolutely delightful read ... So fun and charming'
PRIMA

'Chock-full of his trademark humour and charm ...
This is going to be huge' FABULOUS

'The intricate plot will keep you gripped, but it's the smartly drawn characters that are this story's heart'
SUNDAY MIRROR

'Just brilliant: smart, charming and wryly funny'
GOOD HOUSEKEEPING

'Richard Osman's remarkably accomplished debut is that rare thing: a genuinely funny comic mystery that succeeds completely as a crime novel' IRISH TIMES

'Joyce and the gang will become your favourite crime-solving team in this compelling read'

INDEPENDENT

'It's the characters that make The Thursday Murder Club sparkle. Each one is artfully and sparingly drawn

... Funny, clever and moving, this deserves to be huge' METRO

'Funny, charming and achingly British' I

'Smart, funny and rather lovely ... Literary sleuths young and old will not be disappointed' DAILY

TELEGRAPH

'Blissfully funny, often genuinely poignant ... This is first-class entertainment by someone who really knows how to write' SUNDAY EXPRESS

'Osman mixes mirth and murder in his exceptional debut. [his] witty prose is a highlight' PUBLISHERS

WEEKLY

To Ruby and Sonny – I'm so proud and so lucky to be your dad.

Sylvia Finch wonders how much longer she can do this.

One foot in front of the other, her suede shoes darkening in the autumn puddles.

Death hangs about her like a fine mist. It is in her hair and in her clothes. Surely everyone she passes can tell?

Will she ever be rid of it? Sylvia hopes so, and she also hopes not.

When was the last time something truly good happened? Something that gave her some hope?

As Sylvia keys in the security code for the door, the sun breaks through the clouds.

In she goes.

Part One

---

YOUR FRIENDS ARE SURE TO VISIT

The following Thursday ...

'I was talking to a woman in Ruskin Court and she said she's on a diet,' says Joyce, finishing her glass of wine. 'She's eighty-two!'

'Zimmer frames make you look fat,' says Ron. 'It's the thin legs.'

'Why diet at eighty-two?' says Joyce. 'What's a sausage roll going to do to you? Kill you? Well, join the queue.'

The Thursday Murder Club has concluded its latest meeting. This week they have been looking at the cold case of a Hastings newsagent who murdered an intruder with a crossbow. He'd been arrested, but then the media had got involved, and the consensus was that a man should be allowed to protect his own shop with a crossbow, for goodness' sake. He walked free, head held high.

A month or so later police had discovered that the intruder was dating the newsagent's teenage daughter, and the newsagent had a long record of GBH, but at that point everybody had moved on. It was 1975, after all. No CCTV, and no one wanting to make a fuss.

'Do you think a dog might be good company?' asks Joyce. 'I thought I might either get a dog or join Instagram.'

'I would advise against it,' says Ibrahim.

'Oh, you'd advise against everything,' says Ron.

'Broadly, yes,' agrees Ibrahim.

'Not a big dog, of course,' says Joyce. 'I haven't got the Hoover for a big dog.'

Joyce, Ron, Ibrahim and Elizabeth are enjoying lunch at the restaurant that sits at the heart of the Coopers Chase community. There is a bottle of red and a bottle of white on their table. It is around a quarter to twelve.

'Don't get a small dog though, Joyce,' says Ron. 'Small dogs are like small men: always got a point to prove. Yapping it up, barking at cars.'

Joyce nods. 'Perhaps a medium dog, then? Elizabeth?'

'Mmm, good idea,' replies Elizabeth, though she is not really listening. How could she be, after the letter she has just received?

She's picking up the main points, of course. Elizabeth always stays alert, because you never know what might fall into your lap. She has heard all sorts over the years. A snippet of conversation in a Berlin bar, a loose-lipped Russian sailor on shore leave in Tripoli. In this instance, on a Thursday lunchtime in a sleepy Kent retirement village, it seems that Joyce wants a dog, there is a discussion about sizes and Ibrahim has doubts. But her mind is elsewhere.

The letter was slipped under Elizabeth's door, by unseen hand.

Dear Elizabeth,

I wonder if you remember me? Perhaps you don't, but without blowing my own trumpet, I imagine you might.

Life has worked its magic once more, and I discover, upon moving in this week, that we are now neighbours. What company I keep! You must be thinking they let in any old riff-raff these days.

I know it has been some while since you last saw me, but I think it would be wonderful to renew our acquaintance after all these years.

Would you like to join me at 14 Ruskin Court for a drink? A little housewarming? If so, how would 3 p.m. tomorrow suit? No need to reply, I shall await with a bottle of wine regardless.

It really would be lovely to see you. So much to catch up on. An awful lot of water under the bridge and so on.

I do hope you remember me, and I do hope to see you tomorrow.

*Your old friend,
Marcus Carmichael*

Elizabeth has been mulling it over ever since.

The last time she had seen Marcus Carmichael would have been late November 1981, a very dark, very cold night by Lambeth Bridge, the Thames at low tide, her breath clouding in the freezing air. There had been a team of them, each one a specialist, and Elizabeth was in charge. They arrived in a white Transit van, shabby on the outside, seemingly owned by 'G. Procter - Windows, Gutters, All Jobs Considered', but, on the inside, gleaming, full of buttons and screens. A young constable had cordoned off an area of the foreshore and the pavement on the Albert Embankment had been closed.

Elizabeth and her team clambered down a flight of stone steps, lethal with slick moss. The low tide had left behind a corpse, propped, almost sitting, against the nearest stone pillar under the bridge. Everything had been done properly, Elizabeth had made sure of that. One of her team had examined the clothing and rifled through the pockets of his heavy overcoat, a young woman from Highgate had taken photographs and the doctor had recorded the death. It was clear the man had jumped into the Thames further upstream, or been pushed. That was for the coroner to decide. It would all be typed into a report by somebody or other and Elizabeth would simply add her initials at the bottom. Neat and tidy.

The journey back up those slick steps with the corpse on a military stretcher had taken some time.

The young constable, thrilled to have been called to help, had fallen and broken an ankle, which was all they needed. They explained they wouldn't be able to call an ambulance for the time being, and he took it in fairly good part. He received an unwarranted promotion several months later, so no lasting harm was done.

Her little unit eventually reached the Embankment, and the body was loaded into the white Transit van. 'All jobs considered'.

The team dispersed, save for Elizabeth and the doctor, who stayed in the van with the corpse as it was driven to a morgue in Hampshire. She hadn't worked with this particular doctor before – broad, red-faced, a dark moustache turning grey – but he was interesting enough. A man you would remember. They'd discussed euthanasia and cricket until the doctor had dozed off.

Ibrahim is making a point with his wine glass. 'I'm afraid I would advise against a dog altogether, Joyce, small, medium, or large. At your time in life.'

'Oh, here he comes,' says Ron.

'A medium dog,' says Ibrahim, 'say a terrier, or a Jack Russell perhaps, would have a life expectancy of around fourteen years.'

'Says who?' asks Ron.

'Says the Kennel Club, in case you want to take it up with them, Ron. Would you like to take it up with them?'

'No, you're all right.'

'Now, Joyce,' Ibrahim continues, 'you are seventy-seven years old?'

Joyce nods, 'Seventy-eight next year.'

'Well, that goes without saying, yes,' agrees Ibrahim. 'So, at seventy-seven years old, we have to take a look at your life expectancy.'

'Ooh, yes!' says Joyce. 'I love this sort of thing. I had my Tarot done on the pier once. She said I was going to come into money.'

'Specifically, we have to look at the chances of your life expectancy exceeding the life expectancy of a medium dog.'

'It's a mystery to me why you never got married, old son,' says Ron to Ibrahim, and takes the bottle of white wine from the cooler on the table. 'With that silver tongue of yours. Top-up, anyone?'

'Thank you, Ron,' says Joyce. 'Fill it to the brim to save having to do it again.'

Ibrahim continues. 'A woman of seventy-seven has a fifty-one per cent chance of living for another fifteen years.'

'This is jolly,' says Joyce. 'I didn't come into money, by the way.'

'So if you were to get a dog now, Joyce, would you outlive it? That's the question.'

'I'd outlive a dog through pure spite,' says Ron. 'We'd just sit in opposite corners of the room, staring each other out, and see who went first. Not me. It's like when we were negotiating with British Leyland in 'seventy-eight. The moment one of their lot went to